Clay - Outdoor

Marc Krusin, 2015

Clay is a sculptural table designed to engage in dialogue with the outdoor environment, embodying a synthesis of beauty and harmonious proportions. It carries outdoors the same expressive strength that defines it in interior settings. In its en plein air interpretation, Clay becomes a sculptural presence that integrates seamlessly into the landscape, establishing a refined dialogue with light, materiality, and open space. Designed to endure over time, Clay preserves its identity even in outdoor contexts, transforming a variety of architectural settings into places of conviviality.

Clay - Outdoor

In its outdoor interpretation, the table is defined by a rigid polyurethane base, available in lacquered finishes or hand-spatulated textured surfaces, as per the catalogue, designed to engage with the external environment. Bases and tops come in either round or elliptical shapes. The top is available in stone, ceramic, or hand-spatulated glass—materials selected to combine aesthetic value with durability, ensuring reliable performance even in outdoor settings.
